

I am deeply troubled by Michael K. Powell's proposed decision to relax media ownership rules. A diverse and open media is representative of a modern and democratic society. His decision to loosen the media ownership rules would surely destroy what little media diversity and democracy we have left. Don't you find it a little discomfoting when a handful of giant conglomerates control and dominate what we see and hear today?